The War Today...

By DeWitt MacKenzie
AP War Analyst

THE HITLERITES, laboring under high nerve-tension as the net of military adversity tightens about them, again are having nightmares of Allied invasions of Europe.

Berlin reports activities in southern Britain which, to German eyes, look like preparations for the long-awaited second front in France. Also, just in the Mediterranean, Commander-in-Chief Eisenhower is said to be massing troops on the island of Corsica, and neutral sources say there's a large concentration of Allied transports and warships in that neighborhood.

The Nazis think the Mediterranean signs could mean either of two things. Eisenhower may be planning another landing on the west coast of Italy to assist Allied land operations, or he may be headed for an invasion of southern France, through the Rhone valley.

Quite likely the Germans in broadcasting these reports are fishing for information. However, it's true that the Allies are making many gestures which probably do mean fresh invasions. What Berlin can't figure out, though, is when and where these offensives are coming off.

Hitler's soothsayer thinks a cross-channel invasion of France may have been decided on in the tripartite conference at Moscow. Well, that could be. President Roosevelt yesterday indicated in a press conference that the parley—which he said was a great success—was in its final phases and that formal documents of agreement were being drafted.

One of the most important questions—if not the most important—was that expected to come before the conference was the second-front issue. That red-hot problem, which means so much to unity among the big three, may have been solved.

If the Moscow conference has agreed that there shall be an Allied invasion of France in the immediate future, to take advantage of Hitler's dire straits in Russia, then

MOSCOW MEET NEARING END

Diplomatic Experts Put Finishing Touches On Agreements

(By Associated Press)
MOSCOW, Oct. 30.—Formal conclusion of the 11-day-old three-power conference was in sight today as diplomatic experts put finishing touches on their draft of the war and post-war agreements reached by the representatives of the United States, Great Britain and Russia.

(An official statement on the results of the conference is expected from the Russian capital over the weekend, the NBC and CBS correspondents in London reported.)

U. S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull, British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Soviet Foreign Minister Vyacheslav Molotov attended another lengthy session in the Spiridonovka palace yesterday. Optimism over the outcome of their discussions remained "just as high as ever," it was stated in both American and British delegations.

(President Roosevelt's announcement in Washington yesterday that the conference has been a great success was viewed by London newspapers as indicating that the three powers had taken a first big step toward winning the peace, and that a full report on the results of the parley could be expected soon.)

German reaction to President Roosevelt's announcement of the success of the tri-power conference in Moscow centered today on attempts by Berlin to picture Britain and the United States as yielding to Soviet demands and abandoning their post-war plans for free and independent nations.

In the absence of official word on the terms of the Moscow agreement, the London Star editorially said that "first reports hint that one major item decided upon was a plan for pooling defeated Germany." It added that the terms of the agreement would be awaited in Germany "with an anxiety at least as deep as that engendered on our side in the gone-by era of Ribbentrop's triumphs."

LEETONIA CAMPAIGN HITS TOTAL OF $1,930

LEETONIA, Oct. 30.—With the final report not quite complete, Leetonia has raised $1,930 in the current Community War Chest drive. The quota was set at $1,450. Part of the amount over the quota will be retained here in Leetonia as an emergency fund. Since the quota was exceeded, the committee in charge plans to forward $1,550 to the county organization rather than the $1,450 and retain the balance here, to be handled as the committee sees fit. Edward C. Greenamyer was chairman and Ralph Kennedy co-chairman.

'TB' Tests In First Grade Disclose 9 Positive Reactors

Tuberculosis "patch" tests of all first grade children in the city, completed last week by Mrs. Arthur Brian, school nurse, and Miss Frances Markovich, city health nurse, showed nine positive reactors among the 232 youngsters examined.

Only one child in the community's first grade group failed to receive the test because of parental objection. The examination, given each year to first graders and to seniors through the Columbiana County Public Health league, is held to determine the number of positive reactors to the disease, it is explained.

The nine children who showed by their reactions to the test that they have come in contact with tuberculosis will be x-rayed soon to find if theirs are active or inactive cases. Tuberculosis, not a children's disease, is seldom found in the first grade group to any extent but in the senior group, positive reactions are much higher because they are in the 15-35 year adult stage which the disease attacks most often. Seniors will be tested in the spring.

Home calls were made by the nurses in the cases of the nine positive reactors to seek the source of contact with the disease or to uncover any possible unknown case of tuberculosis in the home.

The highest percentage of students taking the test was recorded this year, the health nurses reported, pointing out that of 233 first graders enrolled, 232 received the test.

SLAVS FIGHT ON HUNGARIAN SOIL

LONDON, Oct. 30.—Audacious Yugoslav guerrillas crossed the Hungarian frontier today in widening battles against German and satellite troops, and same units now are fighting on Hungarian territory, a communique broadcast by the Yugoslav Army of Liberation announced.

The crossing was made from Zagorje province, north of Zagreb. Extensive operations along the Dalmatian coast, in which a German column was defeated after 10 hours of fierce fighting, also was reported in the communique from Gen. Josip Broz (Tito). Some 150 Nazi troops were killed or wounded. Twenty Allied planes assisted in the Dalmatian operation, bombing enemy columns near Ston, Metkovic, Split, and other localities near Kila. 45 miles north of Split, the bulletin continued.

German's hurried Yugoslav divisions were reported facing a new Adriatic threat with formation in northeast Italy of an army of 30,000 experienced Italian fighters whose arms are supplied by Yugoslav partisans.

Units of this force already have fought a bloody 24-hour battle with Nazi troops at Verona, a dispatch to the Swiss newspaper Nachrichten said. The Italians were said to have retreated to the mountains in the face of German reinforcements rushed from Venice, Milan and Turin.

PARATROOPER UNITS MOP UP JAP OUTPOSTS

Enemy's Hold On Solomons Threatened by Invasion Of Choiseul

(By Associated Press)
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Oct. 30.—American paratroop invasion of Choiseul Island pointed a menacing spearhead today at the last 260 miles the Japanese control in the 680-mile-long chain of Solomon islands. Already the air fields left to them are largely in ruins.

Latest war reports today told of the Americans parachuting unopposed down on the southwestern side of Choiseul; of a trap closing around Japanese soldiers on invaded Treasury (Mono) island; and of hundreds of bombers and fighters dropping record tonnages of explosives on enemy runways and airbase installations without any interference of Japan's badly crippled South Pacific airforce.

The invasion of Choiseul, flanking the last big Nipponese base of Bougainville now barring the way to Rabaul, opened Thursday at the village of Voza, a staging base for enemy barges. Japanese in the area fled north without a fight.

Only the day before, amphibious American and New Zealand troops landed with naval and air protection on the two Treasury islands, 30 miles south of Bougainville.

Pursued by troops and pounded by Ventura bombers, the few hundred Japanese there now are being cornered, with a sea and air blockade set up to prevent their evacuation.

Tuesday the way was paved for the easy execution of the Treasury-Choiseul operations by an air blitz of Bougainville such as the South Pacific had never known before.

Not only were the bomb-cratered fields on the southern Bougainville ploughed deeper but little Buka island at the northern tip was devastated.

Greenhouse Operator Marks 25 Years In Business Here

As a man who ventured upon a business he knew little or nothing about, Perry McArthur, Salem florist, today paused to look back upon 25 years of successful greenhouse operations.

It was in the fall of 1918 when employed as a clerk at the Salem postoffice, that McArthur decided to start a greenhouse. His first building, 16 by 50 feet, has since been enlarged and today the former postal worker operates one of the finest and best-equipped greenhouses in this section of the state.

In observance of the 25th anniversary, "open house" will be held at the greenhouse, 1152 S. Lincoln ave., from 7 to 9 p. m. Monday.

From McArthur's original 180 square feet of greenhouse space, his place of business has been enlarged until today it includes 30,000 square feet of space, devoted to the work of raising flowers and vegetable plants for retail trade. Oddly enough, the motto he adopted in the early days of business was "watch us grow."

OHIO M'ARTHUR DRIVE OPENED

New Presidential Figure Injected Into Bricker Campaign Program

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Oct. 30.—An Ohio "Gen. Douglas MacArthur for President" campaign, which apparently caught the state's Republican leaders unawares, was under way today.

The drive for MacArthur supporters was launched yesterday as Buckeye GOP leaders prepared to endorse Gov. John W. Bricker for the presidential nomination and a national committee to draft either the general or the Ohio governor as the party's nominee opened headquarters in New York.

John A. Schaefer, in charge of the New York headquarters, said the committee was "purely a voluntary movement among Republicans who do not see eye to eye with Wendell L. Willkie and who accept the statement of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey that he is not a candidate for the nomination."

He declared neither MacArthur nor Bricker had been consulted and added that the committee would throw its support to the one who was "most available" as nomination time neared.

Pamphlet Issued

A pamphlet being mailed to Republicans from the headquarters is titled, "Why Two Candidates?" It says: "Douglas MacArthur and John W. Bricker can and should be molded into suitable candidates for the Republican presidential nomination in 1944."

15 Towns Fall To Allies In New Advance

(By Associated Press)
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Algiers, Oct. 30.—British troops of the Fifth army, storming across the Regia canal in a three-mile plunge, have occupied the seaside town of Mondragone to ram squarely against lofty Mount Massico, western anchor of the new German line in Italy, it was announced today.

Further inland, American forces developed a flanking threat against Mount Massico, capturing Pietravairano which dominates both the upper Volturno river valley and the main Capua-Rome highway.

Simultaneously, the British Eighth army to the east forged ahead to take Montemitro, on the lower bank of the Trigno river 14 miles inland from their bridgehead in the San Salvo area, where the heaviest fighting on the Italian front still raged.

Some 15 towns in all fell to the Allied advance, hindered by heavy rains and mud in all sectors. Mule transport had to be substituted for motor vehicles in some mountainous localities.

The British sprang from trenches and foxholes along the southern banks of the Regia canal to take Mondragone. They had been held to that line, paralleling the lower Volturno river, for more than a week by heavy enemy fire from the lower slopes of Massico ridge.

Mondragone was deserted, and an Allied officer said the town had become valueless to the Germans, who would make their really important stands from the ridge itself. Several bridgeheads forced across the canal all along the line remained under fire of long-range German guns.

American troops drove forward four miles to capture Pietravairano, 15½ miles north of Capua and five miles southwest of Raviganina.

Pietravairano was described officially as "a very important feature on very high ground which gives the Fifth army control of elevated areas on both sides of the upper Volturno, and provides observation over the network of roads due west."

The town is 21 miles northeast of Mondragone, and opened the way for a possible sweep around Massico.

Also captured in this push were Pietramelara, 4½ miles northeast of Sparanise, and numerous small villages, including San Pasquale, Assana, Visciano, San Felice, and San Antonio Abate.

Genoa Is Bombed

It likewise yielded possession of Ponte Do Ravascina—a bridge over the upper Volturno—and the entire lateral road running from Ravascina southwest.

The British drive in the western coastal sector carried through several small villages, among them Santa Nicola, Cappabianca, Saraceni, Pizzone and Santa Andrea.

Flying Fortresses hammered Genoa yesterday in the first bombing of that city by planes based in the Mediterranean, hitting the Ansaldo steelworks and freight yards. Heavy air support of ground operations continued.

Upwards of 7,000 Ohio miners stayed away from pits in east Ohio and the Hocking valley today, closing at least 18 mines and reducing two others to partial work.

Commissioner Ford Sampson of the Ohio Coal association said he believed all mines would be down by Monday, making about 25,000 men in the state idle.

Mines reported shutdown today included 12 in the Hocking valley, involving about 4,000 men, and six in the east Ohio belt. Two others in the east—Piney Fork and Dun Glen—worked with skeleton crews.

There was no immediate comment from spokesmen for the United Mine Workers.

Sampson said most producers anticipated no further walkouts today. "Miners who work Saturday get time-and-a-half and make $10 for the day's work," he explained.

Ohio mines down, and the number of men they idle at each are: Eastern area—Dun Glen, 470; the Florence and Barton shafts of the Y and O Coal Co., 850; David C. Norton, Adena, 118; Lorain Coal and Dock, Blaine, 600; Rail and River Coal Co. mines No. 3 and 4, 700.

Hocking valley—Roseville of the Central West Coal Co., 100; the Starr Jackson, near Logan, 200; the New York Coal Co., No. 52 near Tropic, 300; No. 255 at Dry Dock, 250, and No. 71, at Bailey Run, 45.

Skeleton shifts are working at the Powhatan Coal Co. mine, which normally employs 650, and at the Hanna Coal Co.'s Piney Fork pit. The latter regularly operates with 400 men.

HERBERT HOOVER'S DYNAMIC PEACE

The growing statesmanship of Herbert Hoover is evident again in his speech Thursday night at Kansas City. Like all conscientious men with public spirit, Mr. Hoover has been thinking about peace. One of his recommendations, the transition period between the end of the war and creation of a structure for maintaining peace, already is getting thoughtful attention. He has still further recommendations.

Nationalism, he says, will be one of the great post-war facts and must be so acknowledged in advance by the peace planners. Russia, Great Britain, China—all have expressed determination to reach nationalistic objectives. Peace cannot be attained or preserved by attempts to thwart these ambitions. There will be, Mr. Hoover predicts, a period of disturbance after the end of the war. There will be, in effect, no peace, because there can be no peace until the causes of war have been eliminated. "No agreement or treaty can be evolved when firing ceases which will hold against its aftermath," declares Mr. Hoover.

Total war has changed the aspects of the peace problem. It no longer lies between nations, as before, but among all nations. Peace, suggests Mr. Hoover, must be dynamic; we must make peace before we preserve it. Worldwide institutions to preserve peace should be the last phase of peace-making, not the first. The former president's proposal here is to create by consent of the United Nations a trusteeship of nations which have given leadership in the war to continue their collaboration as creators of the requisite conditions for peace. When those conditions have been accomplished, then will be the time to make the contracts and institute the framework of peace. Nothing is to be gained by haste, asserts Mr. Hoover, nor is any faith to be put in military alliances, which "always imply that nations agree to go to war at some future time against unknown nations for some purpose, good or bad."

When it is considered that Mr. Hoover, perhaps this nation's most qualified statesman, must make proposals like these as an individual, without benefit of official position and without even the benefit of official attention, the waste inherent in our system of casting out leadership when it is identified with the opposition is uncomfortably obvious.

WHEELS WITHIN WHEELS

Introduction of the treaty-making issue between the executive and senate in the debate on the Connally resolution for post-war collaboration suggests the wheels within the wheels of this proposal.

In other words, an administration-controlled senate conceivably might be used to deprive itself in advance of its own prerogative of sharing responsibility for treaties with the chief executive. The Connally resolution might be construed in the future as the senate's approval of any treaty made within its spirit and purpose, leaving direct responsibility up to the chief executive.

But on the whole the possibility seems of no more than secondary importance, because unless this intention were specified certainly there could be no binding effect on the senate in the future. The chief importance of the debate, which is being conducted in a manner testifying to senatorial awareness of its importance, is the testimony it bears to America's willingness to support a policy of international collaboration. The question in the senate—and the question everywhere—is not whether to do it, but how to do it.

The real wheels within the wheels of the senate debate are, in other words, the implicit doubts and determinations concerning methods. It should not be forgotten in 1943 that at a similar period before the reaction from the World War upset popular convictions about post-war collaboration there likewise seemed little doubt of whether the United States should cooperate with other governments to keep the peace. It was only when the discussion got down to the question of methods of keeping the peace that the country divided itself into strong opinion blocs.

ATTRITION

Admiral Nimitz, who calls the Solomons-New Guinea area a "sinkhole" for Japan's ships, planes and men, and the United States soldiers, sailors and aviators who have made it that way are fighting a successful campaign of attrition.

This type of warfare, though widely discussed during the brief interlude between the attack on Poland in 1939 and the ever-running of western Europe in 1940—the "phony war"—had passed from popular attention. After what happened to France and Great Britain, which believed they could wear down Germany while holding it within bounds, attrition sounded like a discredited theory.

There is a difference, however, between the defensive attrition practiced by the French and British in the winter of 1939-40 and the offensive attrition practiced by the United States in the Pacific. There, the enemy is being sought out and destroyed, driven back, forced to defend himself against attack at many points, obliged to use up his resources in an expanding war against an opponent whose forces are stronger each day than they were the day before. Japan's ships and planes are being used up at a rate which already may be greater than the maximum rate of replacement. "Her total air strength," Admiral Nimitz predicts, "will actually dwindle to the point where it must be kept at home or suffer total destruction."

The war with Japan will not be won by attrition, but failure to understand what attrition is doing and can do if continued will prevent complete understanding of the grand strategy of the war in the Pacific. It is the prelude to the knockout which the United States plans to deliver when all its resources can be concentrated on the oriental member of the Axis.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, October 31

SUNDAY'S horoscope while promising spiritual or mystical aspirations, with prospects for advancement, recognition of desired favors from superiors or elders, yet is beset with sudden disruptions or downfalls, should wild emotions or erratic impulses be indulged.

Those whose birthday it is should have splendid opportunities during the year, with high honors, distinction, and other forms of favoritism or preferment from superiors, the community or the public. But at the same time an erratic wild, emotional show of the impulses or reckless urges may deny all this.

A child born on this day may be blessed with many talents and qualities to gain high distinction and public esteem, but may negate all this for erratic, reckless or irregular display of impetuous inner forces.

For Monday, November 1

In spite of much opposition, impediment, turmoil, strife and confusion this day is likely to culminate in unusual progress, expansion, increase and growth all along the lines of finance, credit, business, professions, together with enhanced prestige and popularity. With cleverness in downing obstacles, indomitable will on fiery impulses, the most cherished aims and ambitions may be assured.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare themselves for a year of definite choice as to which of two paths may be traveled—one to high accomplishments, financial benefit, expansion in all lines, with honors, distinctions and glorious culminations, the other to reckless, obstinate, willful, wayward, tempest and storm with all sorts of obstacles.

A child born on this day although having excellent promise may ruin all by self-indulgence and bad disposition.

There is no example in history where the house of Savoy (Italian royal family) ended a war on the side of the ally with whom it commenced it; save only if it had changed its mind twice during the same war.—The Echo, French newspaper in Algiers.

It was the first time I had seen what our planes can do. Boy, they are terrific. I don't want to get caught in any more American bombing raids.—Lt. William C. Henley, who bailed out over Italy and spent nine days behind German lines.

The attitude of the German inner front is being entirely transformed from admiration for the fuhrer to a bitterness of feeling by a people who have been duped.—Swedish labor paper.

Speech Difficulties Aided In Clinic

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
DIFFERENT FORMS of speech difficulties in children have become so frequent that in many large cities the Board of Education has instituted a Language

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Clinic where they can be studied and where the exact nature of their difficulties can be assessed. It is from the report of one of these clinics that I abstract the following high points in their experience.

Speech is a very complicated function. It depends for one thing on accurate hearing. It depends, of course, upon sound vocal organs. The cleft palate speech, to give a familiar example, is a speech defect the cause of which is obvious, but any defect in the nervous control or action of the vocal cords may make characteristic differences.

Then it depends on good vision in reading, for much more of our speech than we are aware is but an imitation of our reading. Finally it requires relative mental maturity—not only the content, but the tone and form of the speech, is a reflection of the mental status.

Diagnosis Takes Time
So when a child is brought to the Language Clinic the task of diagnosis is usually a long drawn out one. Parents who bring a child to the clinic about two weeks before the opening of school and say "Johnny doesn't talk yet, and he'll have to learn before Labor day when he goes to school" do not realize how far from simple the situation is.

Parents of the late talkers are usually apprehensive about the child's intelligence, but only a very small proportion of cases are found to have defects of that kind. It is much more frequently due to a defect of hearing. This goes unsuspected because the child does not know how much he is expected to hear, having no standard of comparison. The mother will say the child hears all right because he responds to commands.

That may be true and still a great deal of hearing is lost in the high-frequency range—this excludes a number of consonants such as s, sh, t, th, f, v, from the child's hearing. They are unable to reproduce speech they cannot hear, and their speech is quite unintelligible. This group is quite hopeful from the standpoint of treatment.

Stutterers and Stammerers
The stutterers and stammerers are a large group. In these there is almost without exception no defect of the hearing. Intelligence or speech organs, and to explain them we have to fall back on theory. The theory held in most clinics is that they are in reality, or potentially, left-handed. The speech center is on the left side of the brain in right-handed people; probably left-handed people are right-brained. But why that makes them stutter is something that involves a great deal of shaky theorizing.

Organic difficulties which are seldom thought of by the parent include faulty alignment of teeth. A tonsillectomy or throat operation may during the period of soreness make the child hold its palate in a rigid manner with a consequent speech defect that becomes habitual.

The Language Clinic approach to this old problem holds out great hopefulness.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

D. M. B.:—Why are contact glasses not used more generally?

Answer: Contact glasses have frequently been discussed in this column. I think they are not used more frequently simply because the technique of fitting them is complicated to learn. They are better adapted to some eye defects than regular glasses.

T. Y.: What are the causes of cystitis? Do varicose veins have any connection with it?
Answer: Cystitis is inflammation of the bladder. The commonest cause is probably secondary to enlargement of the prostate. Other causes are spinal paralysis, stone in the bladder and relaxed perineum. Varicose veins have no necessary connection with it.

Mrs. J. G.: Is there any virtue in taking olive oil and lemon juice for gall stones? Can they be dissolved?

Answer: This is an old quack stunt. The olive oil saponifies, or forms lumps in the intestines (if you take enough of it) and these lumps look like stones. The quacks show them to you and tell you they are stones. If you start to wash your hands with them, you find they are simply soap. Gall stones have never been dissolved.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, 235 E. 45th st., New York. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reduction and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

"If this weren't your car I'd make you get out and walk," Rorden laughed. "But since it is your car it's a shame you can't drive it, so I could be the one to walk back."

I laughed too. But it didn't make us friends again. We drove in silence to the Everard gate.

"Shall your chauffeur come back for you after he's put your car up, Miss Hilda?" he asked mockingly.

"Leave me alone, will you?" I said so furiously that he drove off without giving me a chance to get my flashlight.

I stood there in the gate for a moment waiting for my eyes to adjust themselves to the darkness. Then I went slowly toward the house. The lower floor was dark, but a faint light filtered out through the open slats of the blinds in Nancy's dressing room. It gave me a beam by which it was easy to make my way across the brief diagonal of the lawn.

Suddenly I heard Greg's voice. My heart leaped as I stopped there on the grass. It was several seconds before I became fully aware of what he was saying. I'd have given anything in the world to turn and run. It was what I'd been dreading and evading all day.

"For heaven's sake, Nancy, keep on wearing that poker face! Don't tell 'em a thing! Nobody but Hilda knows I was here last night. Jack Drummond won't let anyone touch you. And Hilda won't give me away."

Suddenly my feet began to move of their own accord. They took me across the lawn and out to Havenhurst Road. And then in a panic of shame and fear, I ran up the road and to the gates of Glennacres.

As I hurried into the long, cool, placid front hall of Glennacres, Mrs. Powers came toward me.

"What's the matter, Miss Hilda?" she asked. "You look sick. Has something upset you?"

"I'm worn out," I managed.

"I heard Mr. Rorden put the car in the garage. Isn't he coming in?"

"No, he's gone to the Club. I'm too tired for company. Has my sister come home?"

"Not yet."

"And Wimp?"

"They're holding him till they reach Miss Drury. But I can manage. At least you needn't worry about the house. I'll take care of it."

"Thank you, Josephine. I know you will."

"I guess I'd better take care of you too. You're all in. Go on up and get into your pajamas and I'll bring you up a drink. Would you rather have hot milk or cold lemonade?"

"Tomato juice, I'm groggy."

"Then Josephine said, 'Mrs. Higgins is very anxious to see you if you're up to it. She's been waiting for an hour. I enjoyed our visit. Most servants wouldn't appeal to me as companions. Not even upper servants. But I've taken to Mrs. Higgins."

I thought: How can anyone like that big, doughy creature?

I said: "I'll go up and change to pajamas. Please send Mrs. Higgins up with the tomato juice in five minutes."

"Would you like me to come up and give you a message after she goes? I studied nursing when I was young."

"Thanks a lot, Josephine. But I'm keen to be alone as soon as I can."

"I'll tell Mrs. Higgins ten minutes is her limit," she called after me. "I wouldn't let her bother you at all only she claims it's very important."

But when Mrs. Higgins appeared with a thermos bottle of tomato juice, her mission didn't seem important at all. She began almost where she had left off a month before.

"Well, Miss Hilda, you can't say I didn't warn you something like this was bound to happen."

"You warned me of a lot of things," I said as amiably as I could. "What's on your mind now?"

"You're laughing at me," she protested.

"I wish I could laugh at something. But I don't feel much like it tonight."

"Terrible about Miss Nancy, isn't it? Here, drink a glass of tomato juice."

She put down the tray she was holding.

"I'll take it later—when I go to bed. I'm anxious to get there, so won't you tell me what you have on your mind and let me get some rest?"

She came closer. Her beady eyes shone. Her loose pale lips sucked in the air.

"Didn't I tell you old lady Knowlton was dangerous?"

"Yes, you did—but—"

"You don't believe me. You think it was the Commodore and not her who drove your father and young Hank to death. I always knew she was touched in the head. I didn't figure she was as bad as this—"

"As bad as what?"

"Listen, Miss Hilda. Sergeant O'Toole's my son-in-law and it might cost him his job if twas known I'd told you this."

"Told me what?" I was still bored, still annoyed and unimpressed.

"Today when O'Toole came home for his supper I was there visiting my daughter. Monday's my day off as there's little goes on in the Club on Monday. I'm assistant housekeeper, bedroom and library's my special job," she added proudly.

"Good for you," I said. "Now how about Sergeant O'Toole? What did he tell you?"

She went over to my door and peered down the hall. When she came back, she closed and locked the door after her. Then she leaned down and whispered.

"O'Toole was hot and all in when he came home. He took off his coat and hung it over a chair and said he'd catch forty winks as he was to be on duty tonight again. Then Isabel—that's my daughter and she's a great one for tidying up like her maw—Isabel saw something sticking out of Jerry's pocket."

Mrs. Higgins paused impressively and I found myself asking: "What was it?"

"It was a handkerchief, stained and queer-looking. 'Twas a chiffon handkerchief. Isabel yanked it all the way out of his pocket as a wife would and she got pretty mad. I'll tell you, at finding a woman's handkerchief in her man's pocket. So she began to shout and yammer: 'It's marked Flo. Who is this Flo?'"

"Flo," I repeated. "Did O'Toole tell your daughter and you whose handkerchief it was?"

"He didn't have to tell me. I knew."

"Well—what of it?" I asked.

"Plenty of it. I don't drive a car but this is so important, I walked clear over here to tell you. O'Toole found that handkerchief under the leather cushions of Mr. Everard's car this morning. 'Twas Mrs. Knowlton's handkerchief and it was stiff with blood."

I didn't have much sleep that night. Peggy came home at midnight. I heard her as she tiptoed up the stairs. I called her and she came to the threshold of my room.

"Why don't you keep your door closed?" she asked petulantly.

"I wanted to see you, Peggy."

"Well, I don't want to see anyone. I've been on the go since seven a. m. A seventeen-hour day pushes me about sixty minutes beyond my limit."

"Come sit on the bed," I said. "There's chilled tomato juice in this thermos bottle. Please sit down, Peggy."

She sat down reluctantly, glowering at me. "Going to pull the heavy maternal, Hilda?"

"Why are you trying so hard to evade me, Peggy? I want to know how your day in New York came out. Any luck?"

"I didn't accomplish a thing."

"What did you go to accomplish?" I asked softly.

"I ran away. You knew that all along, didn't you, Hilda?"

"But I don't know why you ran."

"And I won't tell you. I can't. Now may I go to bed?"

"Peggy dear!" I held out my arms but she ignored them. "Where were you yesterday from half-past five to seven?"

"Do you think maybe I was over at Everard's bashing Pete's head in?"

Peggy got to her feet and stood twirling her flaming halo hat by the ribbons that were meant to tie it on the back of her copper curls.

"Peggy, where were you?"

"Here. Dressing. Don't try to verify it. No one saw me come in at about 5:30 or go out again three quarters of an hour later."

"Three quarters of an hour later?" I asked.

Peggy nodded. "At the fatal hour. Oh, for heaven's sake, Hilda, don't look so blooming solemn! I left here at 6:15."

"Pete was dead by then," I said. "Peggy stared at me. 'It takes a load off your mind to find I have an alibi. That 6:15 alibi sets your heart at rest about little sister, doesn't it, Hilda?'"

"As if I needed that!"

"Well, it's lucky you don't. For I'm here to tell you that Pete was still alive at twenty minutes past six: I saw him." I concealed my surprise over this startling news as Peggy sped on: "And if you ask me any questions or let anything slip at the inquest, maybe they'll arrest me before I can find out whether it was Nancy or Greg or never mind who—that did it."

"Does State's Attorney Drummond know you saw Pete?" I asked.

"Sure. Why not?"

"I'm afraid of Jack," I said. Peggy laughed. "Don't be funny!"

"Peggy," I pleaded. "Tell me the truth. Did you really see Pete at twenty minutes past six?"

"I've told you."

"Maybe your watch was wrong."

"Why are you so set up about it, Hilda? I checked on my watch. It's about a minute fast. So it was 6:19 . . . 6:18 maybe. Anyway it was later than quarter-past when I saw Pete and another man going down the path toward the Everard garage. It was pretty dark, so I can't be sure. But I think the other man was Greg Mason."

What kept me awake most of the night was a sudden flash of reason: Pete's body wasn't discovered till after Peggy left for New York. So why did she run away?

Why, unless she knew Pete was dead?

While the press continued to "play up" the Havenhurst-on-Sound mystery, most of us directly concerned managed to escape the full glare of publicity. Perhaps, the diplomacy of the State's Attorney's office (Jack Drummond was liked by reporters and cameramen), and the genial tact of Aunt Carrie helped lighten that notoriety ordeal.

Pete Everard was buried on Tuesday afternoon. Greg Mason came out for the funeral and Jack Drummond took us to the cemetery in his car. There were six other automobiles in the cortege that followed Pete to his grave.

The coroner's inquest was held, Wednesday, and the whole town of Havenhurst tried to jam into one room in the County Courthouse.

Since I had witnessed the finding of the body, I was subpoenaed to testify. I didn't mind much, though it was hot and stuffy in the courtroom.

It was all routine at first. Jack told how he'd found the body; the medical examiner took fifteen minutes to say that the waffle iron was the death weapon. Then Officer Nolan and Sergeant O'Toole and Detective Romeo ("Romey" to us) J. Hodges went over a number of details that were no longer news to anyone who had a few cents for a daily paper.

Washington Round-up

News and Views, Briefly On What's Going On In Capital

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—American forces have gained the upper hand in the battle of the submarines in the Pacific where the job is to break Japanese supply lines and in the Atlantic where the right has been to drive off Nazi U-boats.

This flat conclusion was supported today in two statements by Secretary of the Navy Knox:

1.—The war against Nazi raiders in the Atlantic has been successful to the point where planned construction of 427 additional anti-submarine vessels can be cancelled.

2.—The campaign against the Japanese merchant fleet is proceeding at full speed and with steadily increasing forces.

Knox's announcement of increasing activities against Japanese supply lines serving their scattered bases in the Pacific was a verbal comment in discussing a communiqué which reported sinking of 10 Japanese ships and damaging of four others. These brought to 474 the number of Japanese vessels sunk, probably sunk or damaged by American submarines which dared to operate even in harbors of Japan itself.

At the same time Knox reported an increasing need for more amphibious craft. He did not amplify his references to the needs for more of the amphibious craft—landing boats of all types—which are used in invasion of enemy held shores.

Knox forecast a stepping-up of the battle tempo in the Pacific with announcement of plans to provide additional ship repair facilities on the west coast. To accomplish this, he said, construction of 19 vessels scheduled for west coast yards had been transferred to shipbuilding companies in the east. They include three cruisers and seven destroyers.

Members of the house ways and means committee, which originates tax legislation, indicated today they would reconsider a previously approved proposal upping postal rates and liquor levies.

POSTWAR POLICY DEBATE

In the senate, Senator Willis (R-Ind.) found considerable Republican support for his amendment to the Connally post-war resolution. Willis proposed the amendment to reaffirm the senate's constitutional right to ratify treaties.

Chairman Connally (D-Tex.) of the senate foreign relations committee introduced the original resolution, which would pledge the United States to join with other nations in preventing aggression.

Connally has said his resolution was merely "an expression of opinion."

Willis declared he wished to make sure the White House would not consider it a blank check permitting the President to negotiate treaties without senate concurrence.

Traffic Deaths In Nation Are Double U. S. Battle Losses

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—War-time driving restrictions have aided in reducing traffic deaths but the total since Pearl Harbor is twice the nation's battle losses, the National Safety council said today.

Since war began, 21,940 have died in combat and 46,000 in traffic accidents, the council said, adding that official government figures list 65,170 wounded and missing, excluding prisoners of war, while traffic injuries were suffered by 1,600,000 persons, 110,000 of whom were permanently disabled.

Ned H. Dearborn, council executive vice president, said the traffic toll "could be cut in half overnight if every American would merely use common sense, courtesy and caution."

The council said the 15,890 traffic fatalities for the first nine months of 1943 was 26 per cent below the same period of 1942, and 43 per cent below the same period of pre-war 1941. But the September toll of 2,170 was only 3 per cent lower than September, 1942, indicating "an early end to continued reductions."

Rural traffic deaths declined 33 per cent for the first nine months of 1943, with urban deaths down 16 per cent, the council said.

Dogs offered to the Army must pass a physical test and they frequently are turned down for defective teeth, eyes or ears.

The thermometer was invented by the Italian scientist, Galileo.

Cite Women's Role In The Making of A Post-War World

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30. — The women of the United Nations want and will insist upon a voice in the making of the post-war world, women members of Congress agreed in concert today.

"Not one woman got us into this mess," said Rep. Clare Boothe Luce (R-Conn.), but mothers who think in terms of the next generation, those women who have had a hand in war industry and those interested in government, will "demand a voice in shaping the post-war world."

Mrs. Luce observed in an interview that Madame Chiang Kai Shek "will have a place at the peace table, if not actually, surely in spirit."

The Russian women, who have played a major role in their country's defenses, will have a powerful influence over the peace conference, says Rep. Frances Bolton (R-Ohio).

Eleanor Roosevelt will certainly be there, if only in a reportorial capacity, Mrs. Luce added.

All the congresswomen stress, however, that women must earn the right to be represented, by taking more interest in governmental affairs.

Mrs. Bolton suggested that the fields of education and health were ideal vehicles for women participation.

"Women, generally seem to know more about such subjects," she said, and men "just naturally turn" to them when these subjects are raised.

The congresswomen also point to the Nurses, WAVES, WACS and SPARS, who have a hand in the war effort and will expect to have a voice in the peace.

"On Oct. 31, 1517, when Dr. Martin Luther posted his thesis pointing to the way of leading back the church to the Holy Scriptures and to the doctrines of the Apostolic church, there was started the Protestant reformation. The testimony of the more than four centuries is certain proof that the basis of the reformation was on truth and principles that could not be put down. The growth and strength of this movement gives evidence of the blessing of God upon this work. Truth lives and stands the test of the years. The Protestant reformation was one of the greatest movements of all time. It was a protest against popular religion thinking with respect to faith and practice. The type of religion in the Christian church had become cold, barren and unprofitable. Efforts had been made to purify the church, but these attempts had been put ruthlessly down. It remained for Luther to set up the work at that point and carry it forward with renewed vigor and energy. He led the way to the discovery of the power and strength of the Holy Bible. He showed that the doctrine of good works for justification before God must give way to the teaching of Holy Scripture that we are justified before God through the faith in Christ as Savior and Lord."

80,000 In Cleveland To See Notre Dame-Navy Game

IRISH FAVORED TO WIN CLASH

Two Unbeaten and Untied Teams Await Kickoff This Afternoon

By FRITZ HOWELL
CLEVELAND, Oct. 30.—Eighty thousand fans furnished a fitting frame for today's picture picture game—unbeaten Notre Dame vs unbeaten Navy—in Cleveland's sprawling lakefront stadium.

The fighting Irish, with Quarterback Angelo Bertelli pitching in his collegiate farewell to football for the duration, were two-touchdown favorites with the wagering gentry, but the Middies had plenty of support.

Bertelli, the magician who manufactures most of the legend from the Notre Dame "T" formation, goes to Parris Island, S. C., for the Marines after today's tilt. "Accurate Angelo" has completed 21 of 27 passes this year, eight for touchdowns, and his three-year record on aerials is 27 touchdowns and almost a mile and a half of yardage.

The Navy, which coach Capt. J. E. Whelchel said "didn't come up here to lose," will counter with a pretty fair tosser of its own. He's Left Halfback Harold Hamberg of London, Ark., who has completed seven touchdowns aerials this season. Although this Hamberg is untried, the Navy feels he may cost the Irish several points.

In bowling over five foes, the Irish have piled up 228 points to 25 for the opposition, while Navy's record over the same route is 129 points against 40. Georgia Tech, the only mutual opponent, fell 55-13 before the Notre Dame and 28-14 before the Middies who needed a last-period plunge to win.

The Notre Dame five-game point total is the best the Irish have compiled in 30 years. The 1912 team, featuring Knute Rockne and Gus Dorais, piled up 273 in five contests, but counted 116 against little St. Viators of Kansas, Ill.

Game time is 2 p. m. (CWT).

Columbiana Defeats Sebring, Wellsville Victor Over Girard

Columbiana and Wellsville chalked up victories in gridiron tilts Thursday night. Columbiana defeated Sebring, 13 to 6, and Wellsville taking over Girard, 19 to 13.

In their Tri-County league game at Sebring, Columbiana scored first after a 36-yard drive following the starting kickoff. Sebring came back with a 60-yard touchdown drive and in the second period the visitors scored their second touchdown after a march from midfield.

Sebring threatened twice in the last quarter, being halted once on the 18 and again on the two-yard line, a fumble costing Sebring a score on the last drive.

Wellsville scored three touchdowns on its home field before Girard got started, the visitors scoring twice in last period rallies.

Alliance High's aerial attack gave the Aviators a 20-7 upset victory over Youngstown. Chapey on the Alliance field, Chapey had been unbeaten and not scored on in four battles since losing the season's opener to Youngstown South, 7-6. Alliance won its fourth in seven starts.

Another upset was staged at Struthers, when Niles took an 18-0 count over the Big Red for its first win in seven starts. Struthers failed to make a first down.

SPORT CHATTER

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Story out of Washington—via Walter McCullum, ear-to-the-ground Evening Star scribe—is that Los Angeles interests are offering $100,000 for the National Football league playoff with the idea of staging it in the Rose Bowl.

Since the Redskins are likely to be the eastern playoff team, the report may carry considerable weight. . . . Since the playoff is scheduled for Dec. 19 in the mid-west, such a shift would eliminate a lot of financial uncertainty even though it did deprive some fans of (1) a last chance to see the team they follow all season and (2) pneumonia.

Before last week's Notre Dame-Illinois game a sports writer asked Julius Rykovich, Notre Dame half-back from Illinois: "How does it feel to play against your former teammates?" . . . "I don't know," replied Julius. "The only one on the Illinois team I know is Lester Joop, who was on the freshman team with me last year."

The Rev. Arnold Fenton, who taught Yale's Scooter Scussel to boot a football 70 yards or so, says that when Ray first started at the U. of Connecticut he "hooked the ball like a heifer side-kicking a harsh milker."

'Hunchy' Frosh Star of Big Ten

By HAROLD HARRISON

AP Features
BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Billy Hillenbrand, the famed "Evansville Express," hasn't been entirely forgotten at Indiana university but not even Billy in his hey-day came up with any more prodigious football feats than those of one Robert James Hoernschemeyer — the current 18-year-old freshman sensation of the Big Ten.

Instead of living in the past and being forced to speculate on what Bo McMillin's Hoosiers might have done if Hillenbrand hadn't been called to the army, Indiana's football fans find themselves each Monday with new tales of Hoernschemeyer's prowess.

Runs And Passes
He scored the touchdown and kicked the extra point that gave Indiana a tie with Miami (Ohio). He ran and passed Northwestern dizzy and it was not until exhaustion forced him from the game in the last quarter that the highly favored Wildcats finally put the game on ice. He ran wild against Washash and against Nebraska he tossed six touchdown passes, Iowa managed to slow him up but even then he scored Indiana's only touchdown. And more recently he passed and ran Wisconsin ragged.

A native of Cincinnati, Hoernschemeyer, who is best known to his teammates as "Hunchy" or "Hunch," has been playing football since he was in the fifth grade. He started as a guard and tackle on the St. Teresa parochial grade school team at Cincinnati but shifted to the backfield when he was in the eighth grade.

After playing on the freshman and reserve teams at Elder high in Cincinnati he made the varsity in his junior year and scored 42 points. In his senior year his 76 points set a new school record. He smashed another school mark by scoring all 21 points in Elder's victory over Withrow high of Cincinnati.

Was 8th Grade Star
He's been throwing passes since he was in the eighth grade and "Hunchy" gives the credit for his passing prowess to Walter Bartlett, his high school coach and a one-time opponent of Bo McMillin.

"Hunchy" says his biggest thrill was when he scored 15 points in five minutes last year to lead Elder to a 28-0 victory over Purcell high.

Fatherless since he was 13, Bob and his brothers — one a stepbrother — have taken care of their mother and two sisters. The stepbrother — Walter Delaney, formerly a newspaper man on the Cincinnati Enquirer — now is a corporal in the army. His brother William is an aviation cadet at Washington University of St. Louis. Bob's two sisters, Mary, 16, and Stella, 14, are students in Seton high in Cincinnati.

But football isn't "Hunchy's" only sport. He played guard for two years on the Elder basketball team and he plans to go out for the Indiana hardwood team if he isn't called to military service.

Plays Baseball
Although he thinks he'd like to be a sales manager—he's enrolled in the I. U. school of business—"Hunchy" has a burning ambition to be a major league baseball player. And that's not beyond the realm of possibility.

In his last two years in high school he hit .360 and 300 on the varsity team and last year he hammered the ball at a .417 clip during the American Legion nat.

lional junior baseball tournament in which his team reached the semi-finals.

After every football game he calls his mother and invariably her first question is: "Are you hurt?" He stands 5 feet 11½ inches and weighs 183.

The amazing thing to Indiana fans is that "Hunchy," despite a lack of collegiate experience, has been able to match Hillenbrand's feats with what actually is a rather weak supporting cast. Indiana has been forced to rely largely on freshmen and 4-F's but most observers say that his passing and kicking leaves nothing to be desired.

Opponents and coaches say that he probably runs harder on a straight line than Hillenbrand. Bo McMillin adds, however, that "Hunchy" isn't as shifty as Hillenbrand but that he will learn when he obtains more experience.

SLAYER LEFT TOY FOR INFANT SON

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Oct. 30. — Three hours after he bludgeoned and choked his wife to death in her fashionable Beekman Hill apartment last Sunday morning, Wayne Loneragan returned to the house and left a toy elephant for his baby son.

Police said the Royal Canadian air force cadet first went to a friend's home, cut his blood-stained uniform into shreds, and donned civilian clothes.

Then, they said, Loneragan went to another friend's home, got the toy elephant he had left there the night before, and took it to the apartment of his wife, Mrs. Patricia Burton Loneragan, 22, whose battered, unclad body lay across a bed on the third floor.

He entered the building at noon, police said, and left the package on the second floor stairway landing after penciling the name of his son, "Billy Loneragan," across the top.

Loneragan told police in his confession, they reported, that he killed his estranged wife in a fit of rage after she told him that never again would she permit him to see their 1½-year-old son.

But when a grand jury indicted him on a first degree murder charge yesterday it declared he killed her "willfully," feloniously and of malice aforethought.

Marion Enzo Gabelline, an interior decorator who escorted the young heiress to a nightclub the night before she was slain, said Mrs. Loneragan told him last August she was "tired of supporting" her husband, who is 26.

Gabelline was released from jail yesterday in $5,000 bail, reduced from $10,000, as a material witness in the slaying.

The average family in the United States has four members.

The War Today

There already is plenty of pre-invasion activity in England for Germany's aviators to observe. The concentration of troops on Corsica, and the invasion fleet, would fit into this picture perfectly, because it's probable that when the Allies finally invade western France they will strike into southern France at the same time. This double-barreled operation would force Hitler to defend two widely separated coasts of France simultaneously.

NATURALLY this column isn't predicting a quick invasion of France, but is merely repeating that circumstances might make it advisable and that the operation could still be carried out, despite the lateness of the season. Many military experts have been looking for postponement of the attempt until next spring, but all recognize that it must be controlled by (1) the exigencies of the moment and (2) the feasibility of the operation at that moment.

A further amphibious operation against enemy-held Italian territory has been a subject of general discussion everywhere in the Allied camp, and especially since the Allies have effected a "struck" such a tough going.

There's no question but that we have a hard job cut out for us to fight our way up the peninsula.

Such an invasion, however, shouldn't be taken lightly. It mustn't be overlooked that Marshal Rommel, who is one of the best of Hitler's generals, has a hand-picked and seasoned force of maybe 350,000 men with which to oppose the Anglo-American advance. That force is mobile and large contingents could be shifted quickly to meet any Allied landing. Furthermore, the Italian coasts are heavily fortified north of the present Allied front. "Veritas," military spokesman for the British Office of Military Information, in commenting on such an invasion says:

"An Allied force so employed would have to be on a much greater scale than that used for the invasion in the south to be able to hold its own against Rommel's powerful army. The Allied leaders would have to decide whether in fact they could afford to dissipate the resources to that extent without prejudicing greater operations which are planned elsewhere."

of the convention control the selection of the one most available at that time for the nomination. In the meantime consider them evenly, and constantly associate them together politically.

Our national fate is at stake. The stake is too high to risk all on one man. The convention is still months away. Hence the plan to acquaint the public with the merits of these men, both of whom are at the peak of influence in their respective fields.

Sponsors of the Ohio MacArthur movement are three Republicans—State Reps. Robert A. Wilkinson of Van Wert and Guy D. Hawley of Greenville, and W. Hobart Morgan of Hopewell, a former postmaster in the house of representatives. They filed incorporation papers with the secretary of state yesterday for an Ohio MacArthur For President club. A few hours earlier state Republican party chairman, Ed D. Scherer, issued a call to state central committeemen to meet next Thursday to endorse Bricker for the presidential nomination.

Morgan, secretary of the club, announced state headquarters for the MacArthur organization would be established here early next week and local clubs would be organized throughout the state.

Lost Flier Heeds Sign: Goes to Church Sunday

PITTSBURGH, Kas., Oct. 30.—Lieut. Ian P. McGreal, soaring over the Kansas plains, suddenly realized he was lost.

He recalled flying instructors had told him to swoop low over a water tower and read the name of the town, if he got lost.

He spotted a tower and had to drop to 500 feet before he could read the sign.

It said: "Go To Church Sunday." McGreal finally found his way back—and we went to church Sunday.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Representative Frances Bolton (R-Ohio) said today she would propose a house investigation of the executive agreement providing for a United Nations relief and rehabilitation administration.

15 TOWNS FALL

The whole trend of the American advance appeared to be westward from the upper Volturno area to gain further control of the main road north from Capua toward Rome.

A drive from the south carried Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's forces within two miles of Teano, important secondary road center.

The furious fighting around the Eighth army's bridgehead over the Trigno on the Adriatic sector was seen by one high officer as an indication that "the enemy is just completing withdrawing his rear guards to very strong defensive positions, and intends to defend with great determination his new and highly favorable line extending southwest from Vasto."

Can Observe British

Immediately north of San Salvo the Nazis hold an 800-foot hill giving them excellent observation over all British lines. Farther inland along the Trigno in a series of hills dominating the narrow valley at all points, the Germans have concentrated great numbers of mortars, artillery and machine-guns.

With the industrial section of Turin and Milan already largely knocked out by heavy bombing, Genoa represented the most important rear area targets in Italy. The raid should prove a serious blow to German efforts to keep northern Italy's industries in operation.

British Wellington bombers last night attacked the rail yard at Grosseto on the main coastline railway, 100 miles north of Rome.

Six enemy planes were destroyed during all operations, and two Allied planes were reported missing.

2 Negroes Who Incited Detroit Riot Sentenced

DETROIT, Oct. 30.—Leo Tipton and Charles Lyons, Negroes, convicted a week ago of rioting in racial disorders here last June, were sentenced in recorder's court today to four to five years' imprisonment each.

The two men, defendants in the principal trial growing out of the rioting, were accused of having spread false reports that a Negro woman and her baby had been thrown from a bridge leading to Belle Isle, a recreation park in the Detroit river.

The state charges that Lyons carried the false report to Tipton in an upper east side Negro recreational club and that Tipton announced it over a public address system.

Thirty-four persons were killed and nearly 700 injured in the rioting.

Orrville Flier Cited

FORT WORTH, Oct. 30.—Staff Sgt. Robert S. Spiker, aerial engineer from Orrville, Ohio, was presented the Soldiers medal today in special decoration ceremonies at the Fort Worth army air field. He risked his life last June 20 to save the lives of squadron mates and prevent the loss of a bomber by fire which ignited a defective tank of oxygen.

ARMY'S SHIPMENTS ABOVE FIRST WAR

(By Associated Press)

FORT KNOX, Ky., Oct. 30.—Approximately the same amount of tonnage was shipped to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower during the first eight months of the African campaign as was transported to Gen. John J. Pershing during the first World war, Midwest industrial, labor, newspaper and civic leaders were told at a conference here today.

Speaking to 400 visitors from 11 states, Maj. Gen. W. S. Syster, acting commanding general of the Army Service Forces, said the comparison illustrated the complexity of the logistics job confronting the U. S. Army. He informed the conference, sponsored by the War Department, that the Army now is using more than 100 overseas ports as compared with 14 in the World war.

Brig. Gen. Boylin C. Wright, director of the International Aid division of the Army Service Forces, said, "we are really just entering the expensive stage of the war in terms of expenditure of equipment."

After giving the conference a broad outline of the Army's requirements for supplies and equipment, Wright warned that to meet these needs "will require every ounce of effort which we can muster."

Brig. Gen. Frank A. Armstrong, Jr., wing commander of the Second Air Force, told the conference last night that the Allies were intent on obtaining mastery of the air over Germany and that this objective would have to be attained before land and sea forces could invade the continent.

U. S. WAR VESSELS TOTED PIGGY-BACK

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Fighting ships 306 feet long are being toted piggy-back part-way to war.

The U. S. Maritime commission today disclosed the engineering techniques used in transporting the new frigate-class convoy escorts from inland shipyards in the Great Lakes area to fitting-out yards on the Gulf coast.

The frigates, new types of fast-maneuverable submarine hunters, draw too much water to navigate the shallows of the Mississippi river on their way to the open sea. So the block-long craft are hoisted on pontoons, and floated over the river shoals.

The Maritime commission said deliveries of 102 of these vessels—the first frigates of U. S. naval registry since the 1840's—have already started.

The delivery voyage from the lakes area to New Orleans takes about 10 days.

25TH ANNIVERSARY

Last spring he sold 175,000 vegetable plants to Victory gardeners and he could have sold more.

McArter continued his job part-time at the postoffice until 1942 when he added two new greenhouses and devoted his time to building up the business to its present status.

Within the past month he has installed a modern refrigeration system, with cooled display cases in the sales room and a storage in the work room. The office has been remodeled and redecorated. Twenty years ago boilers and automatic stokers were installed.

Mrs. McArter devotes much of her time to helping with the business. Four others are employed the year round, including Norman H. McArter, who is considered one of the best growers in this part of Ohio. Others help out during the spring rush.
